As missionary disciples, we witness to our experience of the love of God in Jesus. Filled with the joy of this love, one wants to share this with others, and for the catechist this means sharing this joy with children, youth, or adults. This sharing requires having an inviting spirit that accepts without judgment. As catechists we do not introduce the learner to our knowledge of Jesus but act as a guide so that each person discovers the relationship with Jesus that already exists and flows out of one's life. This inservice will help you grow in tune with the "culture" of the learners. Recognizing and responding to such differences enables the catechist to teach in a way that touches all aspects of the person - the mind, heart, and body.
